

RUBY TAKANISHI

Ruby Takanishi is president of the Foundation for Child Development in New York City. Her interest in how research on children's development can inform public policy and programs is a life-long concern.

Takanishi started as an assistant professor at UCLA in the Graduate School of Education. She was Founding Executive Director of the Federation of Behavioral, Psychological, and Cognitive Sciences in 1982, and director of the Office of Scientific Affairs of the American Psychological Association from 1984-1986. Takanishi was executive director of the Carnegie Council on Adolescent Development, an operating program of Carnegie Corporation of New York, from 1986-1996. She was assistant director for Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education in the President's Office of Science and Technology Policy (OSTP) in 1996.

In 1998, she received the Distinguished Contributions to Research in Public Policy Award from the American Psychological Association.

Takanishi served on several boards, including the Council on Foundations, Grantmakers for Children, Youth, and Families, Grantmakers for Education, the Winthrop Rockefeller Foundation, the Advisory Panel on Public Issues of The Advertising Council, Inc., National Advisory Committee for The National Children's Study, and the National Advisory Council of the Agency for Health Care Quality and Research, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (DHHS).

Takanishi was educated in Hawaii's public schools, and earned her B.A. and Ph.D. from Stanford University.
